Our Philosophy of Ministry as Evangelical Protestants

We, the National Association of Christian Ministers believe that Jesus is the Head of the Church: Christ is the head of the church. It is his body, and he is its Savior? (Eph 5:23, GW).

While the church has been called many things: believers, buildings, Baptists, Methodists, Pentecostals, denominations, etc., all of these describe the global church in one way or another. However, we believe that Jesus must be the final authority and ruler of His people.

As Evangelicals, we naturally hold high regards for the authority of scripture and the advancement of the Gospel.

As Evangelical Protestants, we firmly uphold the Doctrine of the Priesthood of All Believers. It follows that God has called believers to ministry, and these ministers should know the vision that He has given them for ministry -better than anyone else.

For these reasons, all NACM affiliates (members, ministers, elders, etc.) are given the sovereignty of independence to practice as ministers who represent Jesus Christ. The quality of being "independent" allows affiliates the freedom to be governed by the direction and authority of the Holy Spirit, instead of the NACM.

The NACM is a Christian religious organization founded in the U.S.A., operating 1st under the authority of our God, & 2nd under the laws, regulations, & constitutional rights granted by our nation. By the instruction of God's Word (in Romans 13:1-7), we submit ourselves to the God ordained authority of U.S. government, to the extent that it does not infringe upon God's command to be holy even as He is holy (Matthew 5:48; 1 Peter 1:16). On the other end of the continuum, where there is law, there is also the necessity to interpret such. Therefore, it is inevitable that some will abuse interpretations to avoid personal responsibilities, place blame, seek financial profitability., etc. While we do not like having to sound "legal," it is for these reasons that we see a necessity to state the following. This site provides a variety of information pertaining to Christian ordination, minister licensing, certification, and ministry in general. Such should not be viewed as legal advice, nor do we guarantee the accuracy of content. While our sincere conviction is to provide the public with truthful, strait-forward facts pertaining to ministry, there is never a time when anyone knows everything (other than God). Therefore the potential for error is ever present during human communication. When changes to our services occur, our goal is to communicate these changes. However, it is not possible to be sure that every member of our organization or even the public will receive our attempts to make such notices. Therefore, we reserve the right to make changes to any or all of our services without notice. Additionally, we make no warranties expressed or implied. This includes but not limited to regulated acceptance of ministerial status, training, privileged access, tax exemption, etc. There are US government agencies which hold our organization as a valid source of training and credentialing for ministers. Irrespective of this success, we hereby publicly express as a religious institution of the Christian faith, that our purpose is to unite the Body of Christ, provide spiritually based educational resources to propagate the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Should undesired outcomes arise as a result of our communications, users agree to hold this organization harmless. Scripture upholds the understanding that every person has a responsibility to God to affirm truth. National Association of Christian Ministers is a U.S. Registered Service Mark & LC.
